Highly ornamental and strikingly agressive best describes the new chatclaine which is just now in great favor abroad.

Jewelry authorities in Washington agree that an effort to restore the chatelaine to its former prestige as an article of adornment and utility combined is meeting with great uccess. Women who have spent the sum-ner on the continent don this insignia of the popular Parisian fad.

The chatelaine pin to be en regle must measure seven inches in length, and from it must hang at least seven pendants, and nine chains of various lengths, to which chate-laine belongings are attached, are even more in evidence than the lesser number. Probably the most noticeable revival of this forgotten fashion, which reigned with more or less distinction six or eight years ago in America, was when a superbly jew-eico chatelaine claimed attention among the bridal gifts presented at a wedding of the late summer. This one was greatly admired, and was designed especially for the

Each of the four chains so formed hold in place some suggestion of milady's luties, for which perpose chatclaines in the old days were originally intended. A bunch of keys, a watch key and an open face watch ten times the size of any seen today add interest to the mediaeval relic. A charming example of the chatclaine has just left the skillful bands of a Penn-sylvania avenue goldsmith. It is in re-naissance style and is made of Etruscan gold in the beautiful dull finish which so delights the eye. The design of the pin is graceful and it is gently curved so that it may fit more snugly to the corsage. Nine golden chains formed of tiny links are suspended from it, from each of which dangle a toilet accessory. The length of the chain is a point every woman settles to her own personal satisfaction, and much opportunity is given her to express individual taste. A swivel is fastened to the end of each chain, so that the articles may be readily detached when wanted for use. A tiny mirror set in a frame of gold and studded with diamonds and emeralds is attached to the longest chain and hangs from the center hook of the pin. Next to this is a glove buttoner, inclosed in a richly enameled case. A cosmetic box, a round flat puff box, the newest addition to the array of accessories, and a tiny seissors case, with the combination nait file and manieure seissors fitted into it, daugle to the right of the mirror. An oddly curved receptacle for a bang comb. a siender pencit case, a shopping tablet and a bonbon box complete the number of chatelaine ornaments. attached to the longest chain and hangs

Recent press dispatches announce that anti-forcign riots are apprehended in the Chinses province of Shanhsi. The State Department has received a dispatch from Mr. Denby, United States minister at Peking, stating that upon his representation of impending trouble at Tai-Kou, the Tsung II Yamen had issued orders to the local authorities "to examine into the matter, and take precautions against disturbances, and to make a most express efforts. disturbances, and to make earnest efforts to protect foreigners."

QUESTIONS FOR TAX-PAYERS, o you think that the District should be bended to pay for a new system of sewerage and for street exten-sion and improvements? o you think that, should a bond bill pass, any of the money realized from the sale of these bonds should be extended in improving related be expended in improving private real estate holdings outside the city proper and remote from the great body of tax-payers?

Perfect Purity

Is really the principal claim for Butter-Perhaps, under the most favorable conditions, the best Fresh Butter may be as good as Butterine; but not one consumer in ten thousand gets his Butter when it is absolutely fresh. - The very minute that Butter comes out of the churn it starts on the road to rancidity. It may become wholly unfit for use within a few days, or it may take a couple of weeks. Butterine is always wholesome; never rancid. It is better and safer than the best Butter that was ever churned. It costs the same, or less, than common Butter.
